Pitcher Has Left District of Columbia for His Home.

W ALTER JOHNSON, the star pitcher of the Washington American League Club, left the capitol city yesterday afternoon for his home. Johnson and the Washington Club owners have come to the parting of the ways. He has been given his last chance to respond to a request to sign a contract at the figures fixed by Manager McAleer, and unless the pitcher suffers an eleventh hour change of heart the Senators will open the season without the services of the great flinger. The Washington papers seem to side with the club.

The Athletics captured the fourth game of the spring series with the Phillies yesterday. The victory makes it three out of four for the world's champs, which practically decides the series. The best the Dooin boys can get now is a tie.
